The whipping-post folks often roast. How whimsical, how queer! Men s taste is such, They change so much. Shut up, don t howl, don t cry. Saw wood, you ll soon know why. Don t get upset; now gently, gently. Give me your ear - both ears intently. The day of the whipping broke clear and bright, The sun looked down on a wond rous sight. Look! what is that crowd so patiently waiting? What means all this chatter, what are they debating? Why, haven t you heard, it s advertised wide - They are waiting to cheer the Delaware Bride. The Delaware Bride is a post made of deal, Dumb witness of many a sinner s sharp squeal. All hail to the lash, give us gore, let it pour! All hail to the time-honored Delaware law! Pretty little Mabel was a teacher in the school; Pretty little Mabel thought she s break the golden...
