Her death on the 9th April, 1864, was a sudden one--not arising from the cause which had occasioned so much anxiety through life, but from a stroke of paraplexy four days previously, which deprived her of speech, and almost of consciousness. The perusal of this brief memoir will serve to stimulate the zeal, benevolence, and spirituality of our readers. Thf. Spring Bouquet. A Story for Easter. By M. A. G. London: William Macintosh, pp. 90. A Charming little book. It will be read with interest by every child, and can hardly fail of leaving a useful impression on the mind...
