Confedrate kings! since nothing can oppose The truce you purpose with our treachrous foes, With mischief pregnant; I alone am free, Nor these my eyes the fatal rite shall fee; Lest it be said, when mischief shall succeed, Tydides saw it, and approvd the deed. Speaking he graspd his spear and pondrous shield; And movd like Mars, when, midst th imbattePd field, Sublime he stalks to kindle fierce alarms, To swell the tumult and the rage of arms. Such scemd the chief: the princes with surprize Turnd on the king of men, at once their eyes. He thus began: Since now the public choice The truce approves, with one consenting voice i Tydides only, with superior pride, Tho youngest, still the readiest to decide, Our genral sense condemns; his haughty foul Must not the counsels of the host control, Brave tho he is: the altars ready stand; In order waits the consecrated band; Straight let us seal the truce with blood and wine, And, to attest it, call the powrs divine. The The monarch thus; Tydides to his tent, Thro the still host, in sullen sorrow went. Fixd in his mind the fatal vision stayd, Snatchd by invading force his lovely maid; The fraud of Cytherea; still his heart Incessant anguish felt, and lasting smart: And, as a lion, when his side retains...
