No; I didn t tell him the money value - he d send his valet to find out. - The Captive, Kipling. I. Away back in the days of grand political rallies, of torchlight processions and campaign songs and slogans, the days when men went about decorated with gold or silver beetles and the air was filled with shouts of Remember the crime of seventy-three, and answering yells of American tin, the question of ships began to stir and trouble a few - very few - farsighted men. A little later it took form as a slogan of its own, and the excited gentleman on the cracker barrel would wave his arms and declare that the issues before the American people were imperialism and ship subsidy. When for the last time the American people declared through their representatives that they would not have ship subsidy other than for transporting the mails, that phase of the question subsided, but the question itself would not down. Laws and parts of laws were repealed, laws and parts of laws were passed, and still each year saw us less and less a maritime nation, more and more dependent on foreign bottoms to move our freight. For a time it did not seem to make much difference, except as a matter of pride to the old expatriates of the Asiatic and the Mediterranean, who looked sadly at the...
